throughout the criminal justice system substance abuse and mental health problems constitute a significant proportion of the concerns of the criminal justice system in answer to the rise of these issues the justice system increasingly uses court orders to force individuals into treatment programs in this volume the contributors examine rehabilitation as it works under these court orders analyzing the efficacy of the judicial approach exploring key features of service delivery partnership arrangements and the professional and ethical dilemmas that arise they highlight perspectives from service users themselves providing rare and valuable insight for criminal justice research approaching the issue from a practitioner’s viewpoint good practice in working with violence focuses on working with perpetrators of violence that has resulted in both physical and psychological harm drawing on the experiences of contributors from a range of backgrounds the book discusses the challenges involved in working with violence and its effects relevant for a variety of practice settings good practice in working with violence is a comprehensive guide to the techniques and skills required for good practice in assessing and managing violence youth violence sources and solutions in south africa thoroughly and carefully reviews the evidence for risk and protective factors that influence the likelihood of young people acting aggressively layers of understanding are built by viewing the problem from a multitude of perspectives including the current situation in which south african youth are growing up perspectives from developmental psychology the influences of race class and gender and of the media the book then reviews the evidence for effective interventions in the contexts of young people’s lives their homes their schools their leisure activities with gangs in the criminal justice system in cities and neighbourhoods and with sexual offenders in doing so thoughtful suggestions are made for keeping an evidence based perspective while necessarily adapting interventions for developing world contexts such as south africa youth violence in south africa sources and solutions is a valuable addition to the library of anyone who has ever wondered about youth violence or wanted to do something about it reaffirming rehabilitation 2nd edition brings fresh insights to one of the core works of criminal justice literature this groundbreaking work analyzes the rehabilitative ideal within the american correctional system and discusses its relationship to and conflict with political ideologies many researchers and policymakers rejected the value of rehabilitation after robert martinson’s proclamation that nothing works cullen and gilbert’s book helped stem the tide of negativism that engulfed the u s correctional system in the years that followed the popularization of the nothing works doctrine now cullen traces the social impact on u s corrections policy this new edition is appropriate as a textbook in corrections courses and as recommended reading in related courses it also serves as a resource for researchers and policymakers working in the field of corrections criminal recidivism intends to fill a gap in the criminological psychology literature by examining the processes underlying persistent criminal careers this book aims to investigate criminal recidivism and why how and for how long an individual continues to commit crimes whilst also reviewing knowledge about risk assessment and the role of psychopathy including neurocriminological factors in encouraging recidivism it also focuses on the recidivism of sex offenders and on what works in reducing reoffending at an empirical level this book attempts to explain criminal persistence and recidivism using longitudinal data from the cambridge study in delinquent development csdd at a psycho criminological level it joins together quantitative and qualitative analyses making its content a practical guide to explain predict and intervene to reduce the risk of criminal recidivism the authors present quantitative analyses of criminal careers as well as qualitative life histories of chronic offenders in order to bring home the reality and consequences of a life of crime the book is aimed not only at advanced students and academics in psychology criminology probation studies social sciences psychiatry sociology political science and penology but also at decision makers policy officials and practitioners within the realm of crime intervention and prevention and also at forensic experts judges and lawyers this important and up to the minute collection of essays by some of the leading scholars in the field will be much used and cited combining as it does sophisticated theoretical reflections fresh empirical evidence and careful attention to specific topics highly recommended professor sir anthony bottoms universities of cambridge and sheffield for anyone with an interest in offender supervision this book is absolutely essential reading it marks a watershed in the development of research and scholarship in this field of offering an unparalleled collection of cutting edge essays on the key issues it will become an indispensible point of reference for many years to come professor mike hough kings college london and president of the british society of criminology this is a hugely welcome addition to the literature on work with offenders offering the intellectual basis for moving correctional practice beyond the original what works agenda to a new and more effective focus on individual relationships trust and legitimacy professor mike maguire cardiff university and university of glamorgan criminal justice systems across europe face major social political and financial challenges at this time this collection could not be more timely it will be of great value to the many policy makers managers and practitioners working hard to improve offender supervision deliver community justice and make communities safer leo tigges secretary general cep the european probation organisation this major new book brings together leading researchers to describe and analyse internationally significant theoretical and empirical work on offender supervision and to address the policy and practice implications of this work within and across jurisdictions the book draws out the lessons that can be learned not just from studying what works but from exploring how and why particular practices support desistance in specific jurisdictional cultural and local contexts offender supervision will be essential reading for academics undergraduate and postgraduate students policy makers managers and practitioners interested in offender supervision the politics of criminal sentencing has recently crystallised around the issue of whether and how a system of structured sentencing should inform judicial approaches to punishing criminals increasingly structured sentencing guidelines are being introduce to frame judicial discretion this volume is the first to examine the experience in england and wales in the light of international developments this collection of essays begins with a clear and concise history of the guidelines as well as a description of how they function topics addressed include the effect of guidelines on judicial practice the role of public opinion in developing sentencing guidelines the role of the crime victim in sentencing guidelines and the use of guidelines by practicing barristers in addition the international dimension offers a comparative perspective the english guidelines are explored by leading academics from the united states and new zealand although there is a vast literature on sentencing guidelines across the united states the english guidelines have attracted almost no attention from scholars as other jurisdictions look to introduce more structure to sentencing the english scheme offers a real alternative to current us schemes contributors include practicing lawyers legal and socio legal academics and also scholars from several other countries including new zealand and the united states providing a multidisciplinary and cross jurisdictional approach to sentencing this book will be of interest to academics from law sociology and criminology legal practitioners and indeed anyone else with an interest in sentencing around the world employment for former prisoners is a critical pathway toward reintegration into society and is central to the processes of desistance from crime nevertheless the economic climate in western countries has aggravated the ability of former prisoners and people with criminal records to find gainful employment after prison opens with a former prisoner s story of reintegration employment experiences next relying on a combination of research interviews quantitative data and literature contributors present an international comparative review of canada s evolving criminal record legislation the promotive features of employment the complex constraints and stigma former prisoners encounter as they seek employment the individual and societal benefits of assisting former prisoners attain gainful employment a main theme throughout is the interrelationship between employment and other central conditions necessary for safety and sustenance this book offers suggestions for criminal record policy amendments and new reintegration practices that would assist individuals in the search for employment using the evidence and research findings of practitioners and scholars in social work criminology and law psychology and other related fields the contributors concentrate on strategies that will reduce the stigma of having been in prison foster supportive relationships between social and legal agencies and prisons and parole systems and encourage individually tailored resources and training following release of individuals drawing on foucault s later work on governmentality this book traces the effects of the rise of risk on contemporary social work practice focusing on two domains of practice mental health social work and probation work it analyses the ways in which risk thinking has affected social work s aims and objectives methods and approaches the short guide to criminal justice provides a comprehensive yet concise introduction to the current state of the criminal justice system in the united kingdom a subject often subsumed in larger discussions of crime and criminology avoiding an overtly legalistic or philosophical approach lisa jayne o malley and sharon elizabeth grace offer an accessible entry point for students and researchers across disciplines who seek to better understand a range of key criminal justice issues also exploring the experience of criminal justice in relation to inequality a subject of increasing urgency both in the united kingdom and internationally this book serves as a foundation for further investigation and discussion a guide for the design and implementation of treatment programs this book emphasizes clinical issues over research and offers valuable suggestions for dealing with problems that arise in treatment contributors describe their work in prisons psychiatric institutions and community settings special attention is given to culturally sensitive treatments and to special populations including professionals clergy juveniles women and the physically challenged this book provides reviews the history and development of community justice social work in scotland it argues that criminal justice social work emerged as a distinct specialty as a result of the law reform act of 1990 and the subsequent implementation of the national objectives and standards nos these created a role for trained social workers within the court system to make a wider range of community sentences available for nonviolent and less serious offenders this role was again changed with the passing of the management of offenders act 2005 and the release of the first national strategy for the management of offenders 2006 two changes which fostered the development of a consistent approach to managing offenders in prison and in the community part i of the book provides a general overview of these developments and an analysis of the current state of criminal justice social work it also reviews the available evidence about when how and why people stop offending about desistance from crime part ii provides an account of the legal contexts of criminal justice social work services in scotland and an analysis of the role that social work plays in both the sentencing process and community supervision part iii examines how supervision of offenders in the community might be developed in order to support desistance better social integration and reduce reoffending the nato advanced study institute on the prevention of crime and violence among the mentally iii was held in may 1999 in tuscany italy participants from 15 countries attended since care for persons with mental illness schizophrenia major depression bipolar disorder delusional disorder atypical psychoses has been deinstitutionalized some persons with these disorders are committing crimes and serious violence consequently societies around the world are confronted with a new challenge to provide mental health care and social services to mentally ill persons in a humane way that will prevent illegal behaviours research in this field has been dominated by investigations designed to improve clinicians accuracy in predicting violent behaviours with little attention focused on the organization and implementation of treatments the premise of the advanced study institute was that treatments must have empirically proven efficacy both professional ethics and public accountability require empirical evidence that each treatment will alleviate the problem that it targets however despite the fact that western industrial societies provide treatment for mentally ill persons who have offended there is a very limited base of knowledge on what constitutes effective treatment and how such treatments should be organized and delivered the advanced study institute was an attempt to stimulate and encourage research that will extend this knowledge base the goals were to review what is known about mentally ill offenders and about effective treatments for them and to provide a framework for the orientation of future investigations designed to improve treatment efficacy this book provides a detailed and practical exploration of criminal recidivism and social reintegration in jamaica it uses various methods to seek the authentic voices of inmates ex prisoners deported migrants and practitioners drawing on an original study to examine factors that might help ex prisoners more successfully transition from a prison environment to life within the community Leslie also raises important questions about the Jamaican state's capacity to meet the needs of inmates particularly as a large number of its citizens are subject to forced repatriation to their homeland by overseas jurisdictions due to their offending recidivism in the Caribbean provides a unique insight into institutional and community life in a post colonial society whilst linking practices theories of offender management it will particularly appeal to criminologists and sociologists interested in tertiary crime prevention but also those interested in correctional policy and practice punishment and deviance
